

Children and young people are able to contribute their ideas about how our school environment can be improved. Our school building and grounds take account of our ideas which helps us to enjoy being here.

School Staff & Parents

I love the groups the school has that are made up of pupils which work on different areas of school life.

The children are involved in all aspects of decision making and everyone has the opportunity to share their ideas in class and during pupil group meetings.

Pupils' thoughts are always sought in various ways, i.e. Pupil Council, questionnaires. Most recently all pupils took part in a playground survey with their ideas being put into place.

The Pupil Council are major contributors to how the school environment can be improved. A recent consultation process on how to improve the playground, involving the whole school, was undertaken. All opinions were collected and will be used to make changes in the playground.

Pupils

We all get a part to say.

We could have more.

There really enjoying what they built from loose parts play.

Mr Williams

An excellent review of how we are doing at Foveran School in including our pupil voice.

Action to improve: I will ask the pupils for ideas on how we can better include them to ensure they have a say.
